In poker one never turns over all their cards until after their bet is called 🌐

For those of you who have sent me hate-mail and called me a racist (and other wonderful names), here's my response. Oh, and the problems with the birth certificate didn't end with apparent diddling in the graphic layers - there are also source document questions.

There's only one way we're going to get the truth - a forensic document examiner is going to have to go look at the certificate and authenticate it. The real one - not a printout.

But more to the point, can we please have a discussion about the actual issue?

That is, whether President Obama is a natural-born citizen?

See, he voted for the resolution (<http://www.govtrack.us/congress/billtext.xpd?bill=sr110-511>) stating that McCain is.

And what does it say?

RESOLUTION

Recognizing that John Sidney McCain, III, is a natural born citizen.

Whereas the Constitution of the United States requires that, to be eligible for the Office of the President, a person must be a 'natural born Citizen' of the United States;

Whereas the term 'natural born Citizen', as that term appears in Article II, Section 1, is not defined in the Constitution of the United States;

Whereas there is no evidence of the intention of the Framers or any Congress to limit the constitutional rights of children born to Americans serving in the military nor to prevent those children from serving as their country's President;

Note the word "Americans" - PLURAL. Words mean things folks, and language is (usually) precise.

Whereas such limitations would be inconsistent with the purpose and intent of the 'natural born Citizen' clause of the Constitution of the United States, as evidenced by the First Congress's own statute defining the term 'natural born Citizen';

Whereas the well-being of all citizens of the United States is preserved and enhanced by the men and women who are assigned to serve our country outside of our national borders;

Whereas previous presidential candidates were born outside of the United States of America and were understood to be eligible to be President; and

Whereas John Sidney McCain, III, was born to American citizens on an American military base in the Panama Canal Zone in 1936: Now, therefore, be it

Again, CITIZENS.

Resolved, That John Sidney McCain, III, is a 'natural born Citizen' under Article II, Section 1, of the Constitution of the United States.

And how many American CITIZEN parents does Barack Obama have, by his own statement and admission?

That's the true issue folks. Mr. Obama is not, under the very resolution he sponsored in 2008, eligible to be President.

Incidentally, the reason this comes up at all is that there are Supreme Court decisions that appear to state that one must have two citizen parents (at the time of birth) to be considered "natural born." Left undecided in any sort of fashion that stands on its own is whether someone born here, but to one citizen parent (and the other parent a foreign national) is "natural born."

This should be directed to the US Supreme Court. There is plenty of doubt over whether a child that is born in the United States to an illegal immigrant is a "natural born" citizen. Indeed, it's open question whether such a person is even entitled to citizenship at all under the 14th Amendment, although we have permitted this for years. In addition a child born to one citizen parent and the other a foreign national in the United States is a citizen under existing law, but whether they're "natural born" has never been definitively answered; the rulings on the matter have instead focused on two citizen parents, leading to a reasonable assumption that lacking two citizen parents you are not "natural born."

This distinction only matters for the President and Vice-President. And before you say it shouldn't, think carefully. The President may well have to order troops into a foreign land. Will he be willing to do so if his father is a citizen of the country he is now called upon to attack? It is precisely for this reason that the "natural born" clause exists.

The entire nation is being intentionally misdirected through what appears to be a bogus document. While we must now conclude whether there is an actual authentic birth certificate for Mr. Obama in Hawaii that matches what he produced, and we must determine that it was actually filed in 1961 as has been stated, the reason we must do so has exactly nothing to do with his eligibility to be President of the United States.

Rather, our inquiry now must be made to prove whether or not the Administration lied about President Obama's birth to the American public. Not once, not twice, but continually, even though by his own hand in the very resolution he sponsored he does not meet the very criteria he claims must exist in order to be President.

Mr. President, by your own statements you are ineligible. We'll take your resignation now Sir.

Ps: Mr. Rubio, until there's some sort of statement as to if and when your parents formally became citizens (e.g. before or after your birth) you are too.
